

The banks currently send mail updating us on the new services, fees, etc. and I don't want to be bothered with the annoying phone calls as well. I feel that the no-call list should stand as it is and the consumer not have to deal with the phone calls of unwanted telemarketers. If I see a service that I want to investigate, I can call the bank or visit the bank for more information.